Patrollers take drivers back to class on school zone safety

Grande Prairie – As Grande Prairie families get into the back-to-school groove, AMA is reminding drivers to be extra cautious around school zones. While parents hustle to pack lunches and kids catch up with friends, AMA School Safety patrollers will strap on their fluorescent vests and stop sign paddles as they look out for their friends in the crosswalk.

Congestion around schools and playgrounds can have a major impact on pedestrian and cyclist safety, especially during the back to school rush. AMA School Safety patrollers help remind drivers what's at stake in our school zones. Parents can play it safe by parking a block or two away to reduce congestion and commuters can help reduce the risk by steering clear of school zones and being extra cautious of pedestrians and cyclists in residential areas. Police will be stepping up enforcement, watching for speeders, distracted drivers and jaywalkers around schools and playgrounds.
